

Summer internship deadline Feb. 1

The American Angus Association and Angus Productions Inc. (API) will offer four summer internships to college students who want to learn more about breed association work. The paid internships begin the end of May and conclude in mid-August. The application deadline is Feb. 1.

The Association's Communications Department is looking for two junior- or senior-level students majoring in ag journalism or ag communications who have an interest in the livestock industry.

- A public relations internship will be offered to those interested in writing about livestock shows and events, and improving their cattle photography skills.
- A communications internship is available to those with interest in feature writing, photography and design.

Students who are interested in either internship should have completed course work in news and feature writing, as well as editing and photography. The applicants must be detail-oriented and have some experience with livestock shows. Send a résumé, cover letter and writing samples to Shelia Stannard, director of activity communications and events. Please be sure to indicate which internship you are most interested in.

Junior activities

The Junior Activities Department employs a college sophomore, junior or senior to assist in the planning and execution of junior Angus shows and leadership events. Applicants for the junior activities internship should have an ag-related major field. They need to be detail-oriented, outgoing, have the ability to work well with all types of people, and be a self-starter. Applicants who can begin the internship around May 20 will be given preference. Any student interested in the junior activities internship should send a résumé to James Fisher, director of activities and junior activities.

The magazines

API offers an editorial internship with the Angus Journal and Angus Beef Bulletin to a college junior or senior pursuing a degree in ag journalism or ag communications. The intern works with the editorial staff and other API and Association staff members. The API intern will assist with feature and news writing, conduct interviews, report on Angus events and beef industry seminars, and have the opportunity to enhance their photography skills.

Applicants should have experience with livestock and should have completed the following courses: Reporting I and II, editing, magazine writing or creative writing, photography or photojournalism. Microsoft Word and/or QuarkXpress/InDesign computer program knowledge and skills are also helpful. Students who can begin in mid- to late May are encouraged to apply. Interested students should send a résumé and writing samples to Shauna Hermel, editor of the Angus Journal.

Any students wanting more information can contact Stannard, Fisher or Hermel at (816) 383-5100.
